The Taftville Athletic club gave Held at Christ and St. Andrew's Episcopal and Mt. Calvary Baptist Churches---Sermon by Rev. Mr. Carey

At Christ Episcopal church at 11 o'clock the service opered, there being evening prayer, followed by a hymn by the vested choir, after which Rev. Neilson Poe Carey preached a short sermon, with lessons upon the final day of the old year and those of the opening days of the new.

Rev. Mr. Carey took as his text Psalm xxxvi, 5, 6: Thy mercy, O Lord, reacheth unto the heavens; and thy faithfullness unto the clouds. Thy righteousness standed hike the strong which our eves too often are blinded; it reaches to the vary bottom of man's heart. They will be the Glasgo, Scotland where they will be the Glasgo of Miss Farrell for two months. They will be all the fellows and indifferent to the changes and chances of mortal life. One day measured mathematically is like another, and one night as long as the fellow. But this is not true in the region of thought and feeling in which income the fellow of the sail on the Columbia of the Anchor in the course of the sun run their race stendily and indifferent to the changes and chances of mortal life. One day measured mathematically is like another, and one clouds. Thy right-eousness shall be a happy one, when its days and events are like the strong and events are like the strong and the clouds. Thy right-eousness shall be a happy one, when its days and events are like the strong and events are like the s of the new. One represents to us the irrevecable moments of the past, and the other stands as the representative of all the plans and hopes and intentions of the future, full of hope, courage and promise. There is probably no one here to whom this hour does not bring some regrets for days wasted, mistakes, opportunities lost. But it is wrong to dwell on the past, it is fatal to a better future. Like St. Paul, we should turn our eyes and thoughts towards the coming year. Our God is not a god of the dead, but the living, and the future is allye to each one of us with great and splendid possibilities.
